

After a lifetime of working with and studying wildlife, with particular regard to the badger, I can honestly say that I have yet to discover these creatures guilty of a crime sufficient to warrant their destruction, even in a single instance.